

MUSEUM OF THE MOVING IMAGE

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

TWO ACCLAIMED SERIES, HBO'S IRMA VEP AND THE REHEARSAL, ADDED TO MoMI'S CURATORS' CHOICE BEST-OF-2022 SCREENING SERIES, PLUS NEW FILMS AND SPECIAL GUESTS, INCLUDING PAUL DANO

Paul Dano with The Fabelmans, Charlotte Wells with Aftersun, Ondi Timoner with Last Flight Home, and Antoneta Alamat Kusijanović with Murina

Upcoming titles include Oscar-shortlisted documentary features All That Breathes, Last Flight Home, and The Territory and international features Saint Omer, EO, and Decision to Leave

Curators' Choice continues through January 22

Astoria, New York, December 21, 2022 — Museum of the Moving Image's popular annual series Curators' Choice offers New Yorkers an opportunity to see some of the past year's best films and series in a theatrical setting. The Museum has just announced the addition of two acclaimed HBO series to the lineup: Olivier Assayas's Irma Vep and Nathan Fielder's The Rehearsal; plus personal appearances, including actor Paul Dano with Steven Spielberg's The Fabelmans (December 29); director Charlotte Wells with Aftersun (January 7); director Antoneta Alamat Kusijanović with Murina (January 8); and director Ondi Timoner with Last Flight Home (January 14). The updated lineup is below, including new films added since the series was first announced: RRR from director S. S. Rajamouli, who was just awarded Best Director by the New York Film Critic's Circle; Top Gun: Maverick; and Qiu Jiong-jiong's A New Old Play. The series was organized by Curator of Film Eric Hynes and Associate Curator of Film Edo Choi.

Hynes noted, "While journalists, industry insiders, market analysts, and armchair speculators endlessly debated the fate of fickle moviegoing and streaming subscriptions, these selections suggest an alternative narrative for the moving image in 2022, one defined by evolving processes and forms, the instability and anxieties over how we encounter the work perhaps freeing artists to let the work become whatever it may. It's also a year in which numerous filmmakers told their own stories, and in so doing made some of their best work."

The survey comprises festival standouts (Dos Estaciones, Murina), awards season staples (Nope, All That Breathes, The Territory, Aftersun, Decision to Leave, The Fabelmans), overlooked gems (Benediction, Apollo 10 ½: A Space Age Childhood), vanguard innovations in form and genre (We Met in Virtual Reality, Marcel the Shell with Shoes On, Expedition Content, We're All Going to the World's Fair), and one of the most audacious documentaries in recent memory (Jackass Forever). This year's series also includes two films by Claire Denis (Both Sides of the Blade and Stars at Noon) and three films by Hong Sangsoo (Introduction, In Front of Your Face, and The Novelist's Film). Special offer: see all three Hong films for $25 on New Year's Day.

The schedule is noted below and posted online at movingimage.us/series/curators-choice-2022. Unless noted, tickets are $15 with discounts for students, seniors, youth, and MoMI members. Tickets for MoMI members for this series and all regular screenings are $7, with options for using free passes. Join today at movingimage.us/join-and-support/become-a-member.

SCHEDULE FOR 'CURATORS' CHOICE,' DECEMBER 9, 2022–JANUARY 22, 2023
Screenings take place in the Sumner M. Redstone Theater or the Celeste and Armand Bartos Screening Room at Museum of the Moving Image, 36-01 35 Ave, Astoria, NY. Advance tickets are available online at movingimage.us.

Previously screened (Dec. 9–12): Sierra Pettengill's Riotville, USA; Margaret Brown's Descendant; Joe Hunting's We Met in Virtual Reality; Patricio Guzmán's My Imaginary Country; and Ernst Karel and Veronika Kusumaryati's Expedition Content.

The Fabelmans

With Paul Dano in person for post-film discussion

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 29, 6:30 P.M.

Dir. Steven Spielberg. 2022, 151 mins. DCP. With Michelle Williams, Paul Dano, Seth Rogen, Gabriel LaBelle, Judd Hirsch. Spielberg's autobiographical journey into his adolescence is a marvelously multilayered experience, an inquiry into the origins of the creative impulse, Jewish-American assimilationist identity, and his own family's lost paradise of domestic happiness. Working with his frequent script collaborator Tony Kushner, Spielberg has made a studio picture of rare emotional delicacy and personal depth, dramatizing through the barely fictionalized tale of young Sammy Fabelman his own coming-of-age as an artist and child of divorce. At the center of the film is the complex relationship between Sammy (LaBelle) and his mother, Mitzi (a marvelous Williams), who is plagued by her own personal disappointments and regrets, as well as her long-standing attraction to her husband's best friend (Rogen). Made at a moment when the future of serious American studio cinema is in question, The Fabelmans functions as a loving ode to the movies, yes, but it's much more than that: an intelligent, curious, and, of course, entertaining examination of why we watch—and some of us make—movies in the first place.

Nope

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 30, 6:30 P.M.

Dir. Jordan Peele. 2022, 130 mins. DCP. With Daniel Kaluuya, Keke Palmer, Steven Yeun, Michael Wincott, Brandon Perea, Keith David. Using the format of large-canvas sci-fi horror, Oscar winner Jordan Peele has made perhaps his most provocative film yet, a wildly expansive, primally frightening movie that quickly became one of the year's most puzzled-over, debated, and admired studio productions. Nope is set way out West, on the Haywood ranch, where grown siblings OJ and Emerald (Kaluya and Palmer) continue their father's legacy, training and handling horses for Hollywood productions, a family business that extends back to the very beginnings of motion pictures. After they discover a dangerous (and bloodthirsty) UFO near the ranch, brother and sister set out to identify the flying object by capturing it on film, which proves to be more difficult than it would appear. Crucial—and truly unforgettable—is the story of neighbor Jupe (Yeun), a huckster entertainer harboring a shocking childhood trauma. As usual, Peele has created a plausible yet utterly surreal world that goes down multiple avenues of inquiry—marginalized histories, racial representation, industry exploitation—while remaining a satisfying and scary entertainment.

Dos Estaciones

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 30, 7:00 P.M.

Dir. Juan Pablo González. 2022, 99 mins. DCP. In Spanish with English subtitles. With Teresa Sánchez, Rafaela Fuentes, Manuel Garía-Rulfo, José Galindo. In an unforgettable performance, Sánchez plays María García, the stoic owner of a tequila factory in the highlands of Jalisco that has fallen into disrepair and is having trouble paying its bills. Maria, no longer one of the wealthiest and most powerful people in town, begins to reassess her business after she hires a new assistant. But after a series of catastrophes, both natural and manmade, her world begins to seem irrevocably altered. González has created a drama of striking observational realism that's as much about environmental change as the fascinating community of people at its center.

The Eternal Daughter

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 31, 3:00 P.M.

Dir. Joanna Hogg. 2022, 96 mins. DCP. With Tilda Swinton, Joseph Mydell, Carly-Sophia Davies, Alfie Sankey-Green. Hogg is one of the most consistently surprising, visually and emotionally precise filmmakers working anywhere in the world today, and her latest is at once an unexpected left turn and completely in keeping with her cinematic project. Taking the apparent form of a classical ghost story, The Eternal Daughter stars a marvelous Tilda Swinton in two roles, as an elderly mother and her middle-aged filmmaker daughter, staying together at a sinister, fog-enshrouded hotel in the English countryside. It's the older woman's birthday, and the younger woman is working on the script for a new movie. Strange things go bump in the night, and there's an eerie sense of imminent danger in the nearly empty establishment, but Hogg twists the haunted house genre and finds something poignant, melancholy, and entirely new. Following her transformative one-two punch of The Souvenir films, Hogg has made another deeply moving and atmospheric film about the unknowability of those closest to us.

Introduction

SUNDAY, JANUARY 1, 1:00 P.M.

Dir. Hong Sangsoo. 2021, 66 mins. DCP. In Korean with English subtitles. With Shin Seokho, Park Miso, Kim Youngho, Ki Joobong, Seo Younghwa, Kim Minhee, Cho Yunhee, Ye Jiwon, Ha Seongguk. Hong's deceptively complicated comic drama focuses on the sometimes seemingly irreconcilable generation gaps that keep uncomfortable distances between parents and children. Delicately playing with time as only he can, the prolific South Korean writer-director here tells a story of thwarted meetings and agonized communication, focusing on a young man, Youngho (Shin), who has been summoned to see his intimidating doctor father, leaving his girlfriend, Juwon (Park) outside to wait. The film then transitions to Berlin, where Juwon lives with her mother, who introduces her to an artist friend (Kim Minhee) who could be helpful to her. In the space between—and following—these meetings, Hong creates a rich world of mundanity and possibility, in which relationships and professional aspirations are often connected, and no future is certain.

In Front of Your Face

SUNDAY, JANUARY 1, 3:00 P.M.

Dir. Hong Sangsoo. 2021, 85 mins. DCP. In Korean with English subtitles. With Lee Hyeyoung, Cho Yunhee, Kwon Haehyo, Shin Seokho, Kim Saebyeok, Ha Seungguk, Seo Younghwa, Lee Eunmi, Kang Yiseo, Kim Siha. One of Hong's most ruminative and slyly caustic films, In Front of Your Face follows a middle-aged woman who has come back to South Korea after living abroad for many years and following a successful but now largely defunct career as an actor. Hong observes as she reconnects to people with whom she has complicated, in some cases mysterious, relationships, including her younger sister and a shopkeeper, and meets others who might provide a key to future successes, such as a movie director who floats the idea of working with him on a comeback project. Through these encounters, which all take place over the course of 24 hours in Seoul, we get a better understanding of her regrets, desires, and deficiencies, as well as the big, looming secret that promises to change her forever.

The Novelist's Film

SUNDAY, JANUARY 1, 5:00 P.M.

Dir. Hong Sangsoo. 2022, 92 mins. DCP. In Korean with English subtitles. With Kim Minhee, Lee Hyeyoung, Seo Younghwa, Park Miso, Kwon Haehyo, Cho Yunhee. After her mesmerizing work in Hong's In Front of Your Face, Lee Hyeyoung gives another standout, ruminative performance as a cantankerous middle-aged novelist who hasn't written in years and is in desperate need of a new creative outlet. As the film begins, she is reuniting with an old friend, a bookshop owner, and the two have a conversation that triggers her insecurity, setting her out on a series of perambulations that lead her to a fortuitous meeting with a famous actress (Kim Minhee), whose career has fallen by the wayside and who also has been desiring artistic fulfillment. All the Hong hallmarks are there—soju-soaked conversations, poison-barbed friendly quips, a seemingly loose structure that conceals a rigorous form—though this latest film harbors many surprises, leading to an almost transcendent conclusion that shifts the aesthetic format in a delightful, hopeful manner.

Jackass Forever

SUNDAY, JANUARY 1, 5:30 P.M.

Dir. Jeff Tremaine. 2022, 96 mins. DCP. With Johnny Knoxville, Steve-O, Chris Pontius, Dave England, Wee Man, Danger Ehren, Preston Lacy. Twenty years after the surprising box office success of Jackass: The Movie, and twelve years since the previous offering in the series, Tremaine, Knoxville, and his cackling stuntmen of stupidity reunite for more mayhem. Now pushing 50 and sporting a fully white mane, Knoxville is a mortal impresario, giving these death- and dignity-defying feats an added element—poignancy—which is only enhanced by the introduction of a younger, and more notably diverse, crew of co-conspirators, some of whom were raised on Knoxville and Co.'s antics. The formula hasn't changed—florid Hollywood homages open and close the film, and in between are wall-to-wall stunts and pranks entirely untethered from a narrative thread—but the tone has warmed, such that the very endurance of these elaborate Three Stooges and Wile E. Coyote-style stunts reveals a story arc furnished by time and the documented image.

Benediction

FRIDAY, JANUARY 6, 6:30 P.M.

Dir. Terence Davies. 2021, 137 mins. DCP. With Jack Lowden, Peter Capaldi, Simon Russell Beale, Jeremy Irvine, Kate Phillips, Gemma Jones, Ben Daniels, Calam Lynch, Anton Lesser, Tom Blyth, Matthew Tennyson, Geraldine James. In this aching, unorthodox historical drama, the great British director Davies tells the story of the pacifist poet and veteran Siegfried Sassoon, whose experiences fighting in the first world war forever transformed him. Played exquisitely by Lowden and Capaldi in his younger and older incarnations, Sassoon functions as a veiled surrogate for Davies himself, a figure of rage, torment, and immense wit whose life and art come to represent so much about the social realities of twentieth-century British gay life. Benediction is an emotionally overwhelming requiem that unites Davies's singular talents for both Noel Coward-esque drawing-room repartee and a deeper, poetic depiction of trauma, shame, and the unending hope for salvation.

The Territory

FRIDAY, JANUARY 6, 7:00 P.M.

Dir. Alex Pritz. 2022, 83 mins. DCP. In Portuguese and Tupi with English subtitles. With invaders and speculating farmers seeing to take their land, and the Brazilian government looking the other way, the Indigenous Uru-eu-wau-wau people are forced to defend their own protected land in the Amazonian rainforest, and in so doing try to stave off global environmental devastation. Coproduced by the Uru-eu-wau-wau community, Alex Pritz's debut feature draws on intimate access to both the Indigenous perspective and the farmers who want their land, chronicling a conflict that has profound implications for the survival of a people and the planet. Partially shot by the Uru-eu-wau-wau people and filmed over the course of several years, The Territory is a marvel of collaborative filmmaking, offering not just multiple perspectives among subjects but among creators as well. Featuring extraordinary cinematography by Pritz and Alex and Tangãi Uru-eu-wau-wau, and a complex, propulsive score by Katya Mihailova. Winner of the Audience and Special Jury Awards for Documentary Craft at the 2022 Sundance Film Festival.

Apollo 10 ½: A Space Age Childhood

SATURDAY, JANUARY 7, 1:00 P.M.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 13, 3:00 P.M.

Dir. Richard Linklater. 2022, 98 mins. DCP. With Milo Coy, Jack Black, Glen Powell, Zachary Levi, Josh Wiggins, Lee Eddy, Bill Wise. One of the most underappreciated films of 2022 finds American cinema's deftest memory maker once again plumbing the depths of his own personal experience, in this case his recollections of growing up in Houston at the height of America's space craze. Taking place in the feverish build up to the Apollo 11 moon landing in July 1969, Apollo 10 ½ is a feature-length exercise in Proustian digression, deferring the central conceit of a young boy who imagines himself an astronaut on a secret mission in favor of a finely observed comic evocation of a white middle-class family's insulated suburban existence, where all the tumult and excitement of the late sixties counterculture is held at a safe remove within the irresistible square of the television screen. Perhaps the culmination of Linklater's experiments with rotoscoped animation, the film arguably surpasses both the surreal Waking Life and the nightmarish A Scanner Darkly in its level of detail and fluency of motion.

EO

SATURDAY, JANUARY 7, 1:30 P.M.

Dir. Jerzy Skolimowski. 2022, 88 mins. DCP. In Polish with English subtitles. Few filmmakers today are as youthful, exuberant, surprising, and experimental as Polish director Skolimowski—who just happens to be 84. The legendary filmmaker, whose films include such daring, singular works as The Deep End, The Shout, and Moonlighting, has created an arresting, funny, and tragic portrait of humanity in all its foibles, told from the perspective of a donkey. The animal's episodic journey begins at a circus, where EO is a mistreated performer, before extending across the Polish and Italian countryside as the creature encounters a constellation of troubled human beings. Fearlessly evoking one of the greatest movies ever made, Robert Bresson's Au hasard Balthazar, Skolimowski nevertheless has fashioned something wholly his own, a work of both cynicism and profound empathy captured in a dazzling array of styles.

Irma Vep

Episodes 1–4 on SATURDAY, JANUARY 7, 3:00 P.M.

Episodes 4–8 on SUNDAY, JANUARY 8, 3:00 P.M.

Dir. Olivier Assayas. 2022, 217 mins., plus 15-minute intermission. DCP. In English and French with English subtitles. With Alicia Vikander, Vincent Macaigne, Adria Arjona, Byron Bowers, Jeanne Balibar, Vincent LaCoste, Nora Hamzawi, Hippolyte Girardot, Devan Ross, Alex Descas, Carrie Brownstein, Lars Eidinger, Tom Sturridge, Fala Chen, Pascal Greggory, Vivian Wu. Even after more than thirty years making films, director Assayas has never stopped taking risks, reinventing himself, and finding new ways to diagnose the changes in a movie industry he both loves and distrusts. His beloved 1996 comedy Irma Vep is a modern classic, starring Maggie Cheung playing a variation of herself who has come from Hong Kong to Paris to star in as a slinky criminal mastermind in a remake of Louis Feuillade's silent crime serial Les Vampires. This year, in totally unexpected fashion, Assayas released his own 21st-century serial, a continuation of Irma Vep, starring Oscar-winner Alicia Vikander as a Hollywood star cast as the lead of the same inexplicable but heartfelt project, and Vincent Macaigne taking over for the original film's Jean-Pierre Léaud as the director, who slowly loses it over the course of shooting. A work of auto-fiction that digs deep into its maker's own fetishes, blind spots, dreams, and desires for an artistic medium increasingly on a dangerous precipice, Irma Vep is a thrilling, endlessly generative work about the making of movies that keeps revealing new and delightful surprises with each episode.

Tickets are free with Museum admission ($20 with discounts for seniors, students, youth / free for MoMI members). Advance reservations available.

Saint Omer

SATURDAY, JANUARY 7, 4:00 P.M.

Dir. Alice Diop. 2022, 122 mins. DCP. In French with English subtitles. With Kayije Kagame, Guslagie Malanga, Valérie Dréville, Aurélia Petit, Xavier Maly. The fiction feature debut by documentary filmmaker Diop (We) is an emotionally rich, thought-provoking courtroom drama that adapts the shocking true story of a young Senegalese immigrant named Laurence (Malanga) in northern France on trial for murdering her baby daughter. Having admitted to the killing, she nevertheless refuses to admit motivation and denies that she's to blame, saying she was affected by a curse. Attending the trial is Rama (Kagame), a journalist also of Senegalese descent who plans to write a book about Laurence, comparing her to Medea, and who is dealing with her own anxieties around becoming a mother. Multilayered and brilliantly acted, Saint Omer is both intensely psychological and observationally distant, a film about the impossibility of fully knowing another person and the estrangement of living in an adopted world.

Aftersun

With Charlotte Wells in person for post-film discussion

SATURDAY, JANUARY 7, 6:30 P.M.

Dir. Charlotte Wells. 2022, 101 mins. DCP. With Paul Mescal, Frankie Corio, Celia Rowson-Hall. The acclaimed debut from Scottish filmmaker Wells stars Mescal and Corio as a divorced dad and his daughter on holiday at a beach resort in Turkey. Though they enjoy each other's company and their relaxing down time together, there's an underlying current of melancholy to the proceedings that only gradually reveals itself as the days wear on. Wells takes an entirely new approach to the family memento movie, creating a kind of talisman into the past; it is based upon the filmmaker's own relationship with her father, and indeed the film feels like it coasts on the ebbs and flows of memory. Impressively acted by its two charismatic leads, Aftersun doesn't feel like any other movie—a tactile experience at once naturalistic and dreamlike, building to an overwhelming final passage.

Murina

With Antoneta Alamat Kusijanović in person for post-film discussion

SUNDAY, JANUARY 8, 1:00 P.M.

Dir. Antoneta Alamat Kusijanović. 2021, 92 mins. DCP. In Croatian with English subtitles. With Gracija Filipović, Leon Lučev, Danica Curcic, Cliff Curtis. Winner of the Camera d'Or (Best First Feature) at the 2021 Cannes Film Festival, Murina is a serrated-edge, sexually charged coming-of-age tale set in scenic coastal Croatia. Amidst clashes with her oppressive father and impassive mother, restless Julija seeks liberation from their isolated existence when a visit from an old family friend creates overlapping waves of greed, jealousy, desire, and rage. Executive produced by Martin Scorsese, the film features gorgeous camerawork by Hélène Louvart (The Lost Daughter, Happy as Lazzaro).

All That Breathes

SUNDAY, JANUARY 8, 3:30 P.M.

Dir. Shaunak Sen. 2022, 94 mins. DCP. In Hindi with English subtitles. In New Delhi, one of the world's most populated cities, where cows, rats, monkeys, frogs, and hogs roam alongside people, brothers Nadeem and Saud care for injured kites—black birds of prey that drop daily from the city's smog-choked skies. As environmental toxicity and civil unrest escalate, the relationship between this family and the neglected, eco-essential kites forms a poetic chronicle of the city's collapsing ecology and deepening social fault lines. An unprecedented winner of both Sundance's Best World Feature Documentary and the Cannes Golden Eye award, All That Breathes is the rare work of nonfiction that astounds for both its visual virtuosity and its observational ease around Nadeem and Saud, who've created a haven for themselves as well as their beloved birds.

Petite Maman

SUNDAY, JANUARY 8, 1:00 P.M.

Dir. Celine Sciamma. 2021, 72 mins. DCP. In French with English subtitles. In her exquisitely crafted jewel of a film, Portrait of a Lady on Fire director Sciamma has fashioned an uncommonly perceptive, lightly metaphysical drama about memory, grief, coming-of-age, and the gifts passed between generations. After the passing of her beloved grandmother, eight-year-old Nelly (Joséphine Sanz) accompanies her mother back to her childhood home to sort through mementoes and pack things up. While there, the young girl meets a neighbor who's the same age and is strikingly familiar, an encounter that opens up a portal to a surprising world of emotional connection. Wondrous yet spare and economical, Petite Maman offers an unusual attention to details of sound and texture in its pursuit of a dreamlike domestic intimacy that transcends time itself.

Decision to Leave

SUNDAY, JANUARY 8, 6:00 P.M.

Dir. Park Chan-wook. 2022, 138 mins. DCP. In Korean with English subtitles. With Tang Wei, Park Hae-il. In his triumphant return to feature filmmaking, virtuoso Korean filmmaker Park (Old Boy, The Handmaiden) delivers a breathlessly involving thriller that doubles as a delightful romantic comedy. Meticulous homicide detective Hae-joon (Park) finds himself increasingly drawn to Seo-rae (Tang), the alluringly inscrutable Chinese wife of an average Korean salary man who has fallen to his death in a seemingly freak climbing accident. As the dogged policeman peels back one layer after another of an increasingly baroque mystery, Decision to Leave detours dizzily from Basic Instinct through In the Mood for Love on its way to Vertigo. Winner of the Best Director award at this year's Cannes Film Festival, Park's film is a sensually activating plunge into a well-wallpapered abyss of desire.

RRR

FRIDAY, JANUARY 13, 6:30 P.M.

Dir. S. S. Rajamouli. 2022, 187 mins. With N. T. Rama Rao Jr., Ram Charan, Ajay Devgn, Alia Bhatt, Shriya Saran, Samuthirakani, Ray Stevenson, Alison Doody, Olivia Morris. This epic adventure set in 1920s India has become one of the international movie sensations of the year. Directed by Rajamouli (who won the Best Director award from the New York Film Critics Circle), RRR is an exhilarating, action-packed saga that creates a work of mythological excess out of the real-life story of freedom fighters Komaram Bheem (N.T. Rama Rao Jr., aka Jr NTR) and Alluri Sitarama Raju (Ram Charan), who helped lead India's fight for independence from the British Raj. Rajamouli's film is so baroquely over the top that it becomes a kind of sublime kitsch; as history it may be dubious, but as cinematic spectacle it's undeniable.

We're All Going to the World's Fair

SATURDAY, JANUARY 13, 7:25 P.M.

Dir. Jane Schoenbrun. 2021, 86 mins. DCP. With Anna Cobb, Michael J. Rogers. Schoenbrun's feature debut uses the textures and trappings of the horror genre to descend into a striking depiction of a particularly 21st-century loneliness. Anna Cobb holds the screen with tremulous force as Casey, a solitary teenager in a nondescript, wintry upstate suburb who seems to live most of her life on the internet. As she plays an elaborate online horror role-playing game, we watch her plunge into a surreal psychological landscape through webcams, amateur videos, and Skype chats; the line between fantasy and reality grows increasingly blurred when she begins to be contacted by a strange, equally isolated figure who's either longing for contact or toying with her. With its patient, unsettling long takes and almost otherworldly depiction of the complexities of human empathy, Schoenbrun's film brilliantly dramatizes the emotional drive toward dissociation and the hope for physical transcendence.

Marcel the Shell with Shoes On

SATURDAY, JANUARY 14, 1:00 P.M.

SUNDAY, JANUARY 15, 12:30 P.M.

Dir. Dean Fleischer Camp. 2022, 90 mins. With Jenny Slate, Rosa Salazar, Thomas Mann, Isabella Rossellini. Marcel is an adorable one-inch-tall shell who ekes out a colorful existence with his grandmother Connie and their pet lint, Alan. Once part of a sprawling community of shells, they now live alone as the sole survivors of a mysterious tragedy. But when a documentary filmmaker discovers them amongst the clutter of his Airbnb, the short film he posts online brings Marcel millions of passionate fans, as well as unprecedented dangers and a new hope at finding his long-lost family. The feature film debut of a character created by Dean Fleischer Camp and Jenny Slate and previously featured in three award-winning stop-motion animated short films, Marcel the Shell with Shoes On plays so successfully as a documentary that you might catch yourself believing it's true, especially when notable figures turn up in the apartment. It also plays so well as giddy comedy that its stealth exploration of loss and heartbreak might just sneak up on you.

Last Flight Home

With Ondi Timoner in person for post-film discussion

SATURDAY, JANUARY 14, 1:30 P.M.

Dir. Ondi Timoner. 2022, 101 mins. Eli Timoner has had a full life. He founded Air Florida, which was the fastest-growing airline in the world in the 1970s, met with dignitaries and celebrities and earned the adoration and loyalty of his colleagues, employees, and contemporaries. He's a beloved husband, father, and grandfather. And after suffering through worsening illness, he'd like to pass on. In this groundbreaking, extraordinarily intimate documentary by award-winning director Ondi Timoner (Dig!, We Live in Public), Eli's family and friends gather around for one last round of stories, conversations, and laughs, and to legally assist him through his final hours. One of the most profound and inspiring works of nonfiction in recent memory, Last Flight Home paints a vibrant portrait of life in its loving, generous documentation of death.

Both Sides of the Blade

SATURDAY, JANUARY 14, 3:00 P.M.

Dir. Claire Denis. 2022, 116 mins. DCP. In French with English subtitles. With Juliette Binoche, Vincent Lindon, Grégoire Colin, Bulle Ogier. In Denis's crepuscular Parisian melodrama, Binoche plays Sara, a radio host, living in tentative domestic bliss with her husband Jean (Lindon), a former rugby player shadowed by his past. Enter François (Colin), Jean's former business partner and Sara's former lover, whose sudden return to both their lives feels as deathly inevitable as that of a vampire. Denis has never made a film so sharply straight and to the point as this, her wintriest and weariest work, which finds its network of white Parisians collapsing upon itself in a cyclical dance of animal impulse and egoistic retribution. Ferociously filmed by the great French cinematographer Éric Gautier (Irma Vep, Pola X) in choppy, convulsive handheld sequences that suggest an unrepentant return to Denis's nineties roots, Both Sides of the Blade is a rugged, back-to-basics blues performance from a filmmaker who has nothing left to prove but an abundance yet to share.

Stars at Noon

SATURDAY, JANUARY 14, 6:00 P.M.

Dir. Claire Denis. 2022, 137 mins. DCP. With Margaret Qualley, Joe Alwyn, Benny Safdie, Danny Ramirez, John C. Reilly. Denis's distinctively Denisian take on the erotic political thriller stars Qualley as a marooned American journalist and Alwyn as the shifty English dealmaker with whom she becomes entangled in ethically unstable Nicaragua. Based on Denis Johnson's 1986 novel, Stars at Noon retains a seedy, sweaty '80s aesthetic yet is set in the present day—there's even a crucial sequence set in a roadside COVID testing tent—and the disorientation extends to a pervadingly fluid sense of history, politics, and identity throughout. Qualley dives headlong into a character whose brashness and sexual confidence disguise a deepening powerlessness, and Safdie turns up as if commuting directly from an episode of Miami Vice, a motormouth menace of doom.

Top Gun: Maverick

SUNDAY, JANUARY 15, 2:30 P.M.

Dir. Joseph Kosinski. 2022, 130 mins. DCP. With Tom Cruise, Jennifer Connelly, Miles Teller, Val Kilmer, Glenn Powell.

The Rehearsal

SUNDAY, JANUARY 15, 3:00 P.M.

Dir. Nathan Fielder. 2022, 194 mins. plus 15-minute intermission. DCP. Even the most devoted fans of Nathan Fielder's "reality" comedy series Nathan for You—an unsettlingly hilarious capitalist critique in the guise of 21st-century cringe comedy—could not have prepared themselves for his unclassifiable follow-up, the HBO series The Rehearsal. Across six shifting, amorphous episodes of brilliant, escalating hilarity and discomfort, Fielder destabilizes viewers with a project that defies easy description: challenging the adage that there are no rehearsals in life, he enlists people who want to prepare for major upcoming events or confrontations. To "help" them—if that's what he's really doing—Fielder constructs a series of elaborate "fake" worlds full of trap doors: rehearsals within rehearsals, deep dives into methods of acting and mechanisms for coping, and, as it becomes clear, a thorough working out of the grand creator's own neuroses and narcissisms. Gut-bustingly funny even as it grows increasingly surreal and provocative, The Rehearsal questions the dubious concept of reality itself.

Tickets are free with Museum admission ($20 with discounts for seniors, students, youth / free for MoMI members). Advance reservations available.

No Bears

SUNDAY, JANUARY 15, 5:00 P.M.

Dir. Jafar Panahi. 2022, 107 mins. DCP. In Persian, Azerbaijani, and Turkish with English subtitles. In this thrillingly mercurial work, a city filmmaker—played by the director himself—has moved to a rural village to work remotely. His latest film concerns two lovers desperate to escape Iran and trying to secure fake passports. While overseeing the production, a pair of lovers in the small town find themselves under the intolerant, watchful eye of neighbors, and he becomes embroiled in a controversy with strange parallels to his own fictional plot. A film that keeps reinventing itself, No Bears is the latest superb shapeshifter from the genius director Jafar Panahi, whose work has never been diminished despite being constantly persecuted by the Iranian authorities over the past decade. Earlier in 2022, Panahi was arrested yet again, this time for speaking out against a fellow artist's government censorship, but not before he finished this gripping and brilliant film, a testament to the humanity and endless curiosity of a great artist.

Armageddon Time

SATURDAY, JANUARY 21, 3:30 P.M.

Dir. James Gray. 2022, 115 mins. DCP. With Banks Repeta, Anne Hathaway, Jeremy Strong, Jaylin Webb, Anthony Hopkins. American classicist Gray proves yet again his crucial place in the contemporary cinematic landscape with this profoundly felt, autobiographically inspired coming-of-age drama set in Queens circa 1980. The son of second-generation American Jews, eleven-year-old Paul Graff entertains fantasies of becoming an artist when he grows up, even if his parents don't find his dreams of the future practical. When he befriends Johnny, a Black fellow student at school picked upon by their racist teacher, his family's casual racism puts an even wider wedge between them, leading to a moment of blind moral failure. Shot by the great cinematographer Darius Khondji with the burnished glow of authentic memory, Armageddon Time deals honestly with privilege, cultural identity, American hypocrisy, antisemitism, and racism, while never once feeling like a social "issue" movie, speaking directly to the melancholy of our contemporary moment, while also recalling the legacies of the past.

A New Old Play

SUNDAY, JANUARY 22, 3:00 P.M.

Dir. Qiu Jiongjiong. China. 2021, 179 mins. In Mandarin with English subtitles. DCP. The story of 20th-century China from the collapse of the Qing dynasty through Mao's Cultural Revolution is recalled through the irreverent remembrances of an old thespian on the road to the afterlife. In this hand-crafted masterwork, celebrated Chinese artist Qiu has delivered a gloriously synthetic historical pageant in simultaneous homage to classical Chinese opera and silk painting, as well as early silent cinema and vaudeville theater, without once forgetting to make us laugh.
